

Class Descriptions and Philosophies:

YOUNG CHILDREN'S DEVELOPMENTAL DANCE: Young children's developmental dance consists of Music and Movement and Pre-Ballet and Creative Movement. Every class will have its routine and will be consistent. Children learn best this way, feel comfortable within the environment, and develop trust. While we do introduce students to correct and careful technique, the enjoyment of dance always comes first! The instructor wants the student to enjoy and feel at ease when coming to class each week. We want each student to be willing to participate each week. Presenting the dance material through movement games and stories encourages this positive behavior and stays consistent with their attention span and developmental capabilities. Repetitions of these levels are encouraged!!!

BEGINNING THROUGH ADVANCED LEVEL CLASSES AND ADULTS: Within these classes the faculty strives to promote the art of dance by teaching correct and careful technique as well as body awareness. Our goal is to enhance self-esteem, encourage self-discipline, and promote a sense of individuality within a nurturing, loving, and supportive environment. The most advanced classes are by permission of instructor.

Blue Crew Dance: Blue Crew Dance is a collective program that is open to the advanced level student. As a prerequisite, students must be enrolled in two Advanced classes per week at Parks and Recreation. For safety, one of the two advanced classes must be an upper-level advanced ballet or jazz class and must meet advanced skill requirements. Students interested in Blue Crew Dance must be enrolled in both the fall and winter/ spring semesters as we create group choreography to be performed. Opportunities to perform at different venues may come about. Blue Crew Dance has a goal to serve as an educational establishment for the community and young dancers who want to excel in their technical ability, performance skill, and their enjoyment of dance. Blue Crew Dance is a great way to explore the creative process within a non-competitive environment. Blue Crew Dance has participated in several dance workshops and collaborative performances. These opportunities have included, the global educational organization Up with People, VCU alumni Emily Todd, Liz Lerman Dance Exchange, Harrisonburg Dance Cooperative, Rockingham Ballet Theatre, local PT specialist Sarah Gosselin, JMU theatre alumni Tyler Edwards, Texas Christian University and New York artist Jerusha (Ellie) de Waal, JMU dance professor Shane O'Hara, Shenandoah University's Cheryl Donald, and JMU dance alumni Zilda Baker. Several members of Blue Crew performed in The New Dance Festival at the Forbes center, collaborating with the JMU School of Theatre and Dance (2010) and collaborated with the Harrisonburg Dance Cooperative in a First Friday event. Blue Crew has had the opportunity to perform at several venues including Burg's Got Talent, Dayton Church of the Brethren, Bridgewater College, Children's Museum, First Night, First Friday, Waterman, Spotswood, and Smithland Elementary, and Elon Rhodes Early Learning Center.

DESCRIPTIONS OF EACH LEVEL:

YOUNG CHILDREN'S DEVELOPMENTAL DANCE

Music and Movement: This class is for students ages 3 ½ -4 ½. Although ballet is used as the foundation, at this level the class is taught as a creative movement class. Each class starts with a sharing circle, which encourages students to speak in front of others. Within the sharing circle each student is asked to take a turn sharing something verbally with the group. This assists social skills, performance quality, and self-esteem. Then we usually stretch our muscles on the floor and work on body alignment and pointing our toes. Through stories and games, students will then learn 1st, 2nd, and 3rd ballet positions of the feet. They will then learn plies, relevés, and jumps. Students also learn choreographed dances that reinforce basic gross and fine motor skills (Tuty Ta, Shake Your Sillies Out, Knees Up Mother Brown, Animal Action and much more). Jumping, hopping, walking, running, skipping, clapping, stomping, galloping, balance, and circling are enforced in these activities. The last section of class is geared toward creativity. We play creative games like Secret Garden and Dance Freeze. Following directions, Level changes, recognition of different movement qualities, and identifying shapes with our bodies are explored through this. Dress up time is usually given to express their creativity further. This class is a fun exploration into movement, rhythm, and music all done in a fun and positive environment.

Pre-Ballet and Creative Movement: This class is a transition class between the Music and Movement classes and the beginning level classes. Pre-Ballet and creative movement will prepare students for the fundamentals of ballet and combines creative movement and other dance forms. It is geared towards children 4 ½ -6 years old. This class will have more of an emphasis on the correct and careful ballet technique. The creative process is a little more structured due to the students having a longer attention span. There is a great emphasis on musicality, rhythm, and counting. There is more time spent at the barre working on plies, relevés, port de bras, proper body alignment, and reviewing the positions. In the center, turnout, pointing toes, and straightening the knees are reinforced through the introduction of tendu, pique, and passé. The across the floor exercises of chasse and leaping are introduced and enhance these skills. Skipping and swaying are emphasized more thoroughly in the creative movement section of class. With 5-year-olds with no dance experience Music and Movement might be suitable for that student, but lots of beginning 5-year-olds do fine in Pre-Ballet and creative movement. This all depends on the child's individual developmental rate. Parents should base their decision on their knowledge of their child's personality and capacity. This class is a great opportunity for children to be introduced to the different dance forms and styles in an encouraging and supportive environment.
